

Growth Mindsets : A practical approach

Book a day for your school / group of schools

Leave the day with an implementation plan in your hand, resources to kick start the process and feeling confident to harness growth mindset research in your school. With input from schools who have successfully implemented growth mindsets, you'll be ready to lead whole school developments.

We need learners to be independent, love challenge, respond to feedback, be resilient and take greater ownership of their learning. "I have been amazed by how our children can now talk confidently about their learning."

Growth mindset programmes can unlock potential and remove non-traditional barriers to learning. Pupils become more active participants in acquiring skills and knowledge, are better equipped to reflect and respond to advice, and eager to take on new challenges.

"Schools who have undertaken this training have reported on the startling impact it has had, including favourable comments in Ofsted reports as the changes are clearly visible to anyone who visits the school. The course is thorough in its approach, critically examining international research and turning this into a practical programme that can be delivered in school. Leaders leave the course well positioned to make changes that will lead to accelerated pupil progress."

Delegates receive training materials and electronic resources to use in school

- introducing mindset theory and supporting colleagues to adhere to the key principles of the research;
- identifying 'growth' and 'fixed' mindset characteristics in yourself and others;
- utilising mindset theory in the classroom and developing a growth mindset ethos throughout the school;
- exploring the links between aspirations, mindsets and metacognition;
- create a unique blueprint for your school to support implementation and return to school with all you need to lead on the development of growth mindsets.
